Spring 2013 Syllabus

223A: Fridays 1:00 – 3:00 p.m.

Room: 206

Professor John E. Ohashi

Email: johashi@aol.com

This course brings together the substantive law and skills learned in other BLC courses by focusing on the unique challenges of representing start-up entrepreneurial clients. Students will study business and legal concepts to increase their understanding of their client's business and financial goals and to provide practical legal solutions to help the client achieve those goals. Students will apply legal and business concepts to real-life situations such as selecting an appropriate business entity and structuring business transactions to reduce legal risks. Students will also examine legal ethics relating to business transactions, including ethical dilemmas that lawyers face in providing legal services as clients try to cut corners and save costs.

Prerequisite

See WSU web site for Basic Required Curriculum. Recommended Curriculum: Business Associations I and II (or the 4-unit Business Associations course), Sales, Contract Drafting, Financial Principles for Lawyers, Federal Income Tax, and Business Law Ethics.

Required Text Book

David R. Henderson and Charles L. Hooper; Making Great Decisions in Business and Life

Additional handouts and reading assignments will be distributed during class. Students must have access to OnLaw available through the law library or at <http://westl.iii.com/screens/databases.html>

Grading

Grades are earned in two areas:

1. Completion of writing assignments and final paper. Several writing assignments will be assigned during the semester. Unless otherwise specified, all writing assignments are to be sent as email attachments (Word or WordPerfect) to johashi@aol.com and are due by 5:00 p.m. on the Wednesday following the date of assignment. A full grade point will be deducted for late papers as of 5:01 p.m., with additional full point deductions for each late day thereafter.

2. Class attendance and participation. Class participation is expected and is critical to the development of course related skills. Students do not get points for class attendance but can lose points for absences and tardiness. There is no such thing as an excused absence (unless approved by the Academic Dean). However, every student gets one absence with no penalty. A second absence will result in a half grade point reduction from a student's final grade. A third absence will disqualify a student from receiving credit for the class. A student may be marked absent for the entire class for tardiness or leaving early.
